Hi Piter, we can talk about this when we meet Friday. I put together the rough outline of a paper, which you should be able to view here. A few things:

- You don't need to add these to the doc, but consider the research questions that we will want to use. We can discuss these.
- For the related works section of the document, it would be great if you could compare the proposed process to 5-10 existing works and clearly and concisely compare how the proposed work differs.
- Feel free to edit any of the other sections, especially if you already have the writeup. Don't worry about the introduction, Discussion sections yet. For flow, I'd recommend following Jie's paper as a guide.

These all don't need to be done by Friday, but I just figured that I'd give you a heads up.

Let me know if you have any questions/anything that I can help with before we connect on Friday.

Thanks

-Dan
